RED CROSS WILL SEND OLD SANTA TO EUROPE

ATLANTA, GA., Dec. 20.—For the first time in five years, Santa Claus and his reindeer are setting out this Christmas to visit the children of Poland, Serbia, Rumania, and other European countries, little folks whom the war denied Christmas presents for so long a time that they really didn't believe in Santa Claus any more!

And when he slips down their chimneys what do you suppose will be in his pack? Toys made by Johnnie and Jimmy and Sue, children of America. The first installment of these American made toys has been sent overseas by the Junior Red Cross. More are to follow, for toys are as badly needed by the children of Europe as food just now. Many of them haven't had as much as a rag doll in five years.

The Junior Red Cross is furnishing pamphlets to its members everywhere, showing just how to make dolls out of discarded chalk-boxes of the school room, cigar boxes and other homely materials. These pamphlets can be had on application to division headquarters in Atlanta. Many southern school children are turning them out by the cart load, especially at this Christmas time when they have so many nice things themselves and want to show the Christmas spirit by remembering the boys and girls whom Santa Claus forgot for a while.

HANGED MAN'S GLANDS REFUSED AGED INMATE

(By United Press.)

SAN QUENTIN, CAL., Dec. 20.—The body of Antone Lapara, who was hanged in the prison here today for a blackmailed murder, will not give up its intestinal glands for the rejuvenation of an aged inmate.

The announced plan of the prison physicians to remove Lapara's glands and transplant them was prevented by Mrs. Lapara, the dead prisoner's widow. Although she had been offered $10,000 for the glands, and had been advised by her attorney to accept, she demanded that the doctors abandon their plan to use her husband's glands again.

Lapara was convicted of murdering Mario Allotti two years ago. Police declared Lapara had been hired by a blackhand gang to murder Allotti. After he had shot and killed his victim, Allotti's body he threw three bullets into was caught, while an into a park. He remaining bullet he was trying to stuff the into his hat.

FORTIFYING A STILL

Place of Stockade Around

Business.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 20—

Stockade around the county built a cut in front they plan to still. Then entanglements. Inside barbed wire they had a plentiful supply of guns and ammunition. But the day that when the revenue officers came—found the whole garrisoned away. As a consequence the law officers had no trouble, seizing fifty-eight gallons and a fine, large still.

NEW YORK AWAITS LIVELY NEW YEAR EVE

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—This New Year's eve, despite its dryness, will be the liveliest in the history of New York, according to the belief expressed by restaurant and cabaret managers.

One proprietor said there would be a bigger crowd celebrating than ever before because "everybody is curious as to what is going to happen." Next year, he opined celebration of the advent of New Year will be truly dead.

Practically all the popular paces along Broadway today reported applications for reservations for New Year's eve far in excess of another year.

Technically it is to be a very dry New Year's eve.

The "wine lists" will offer nothing more powerful than cider or ginger ale, but the consensus is there will be plenty of "hard stuff" in evidence, drawn from private stocks. In one famous cafe, it was announced that since the supreme court ruled against a wet Christmas and New Year the waiters would not be permitted to "serve" even the "bring your own." Corkage charge for this service has been abolished, it was said, and it will either drink out of the bottle or drink "soft stuffs."

Rum hounds, without liquor to give them solace, should get some sort of kick out of prices on the prohibition wine lists, however, Special Golden Russet cider at $2 a quart, sparkling grape juice at $2.50 a pint, or malted milk 70 cents a glass, is guaranteed to make those accustomed to a "ball" at two bits, dizzy.

STEAMERS ICE BOUND.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 20.—Two lake steamers, the Missouri, bound from Milwaukee for Chicago, and the Alabama, from Grand Haven, are ice bound two miles off the government pier today with passengers aboard. It is feared the ice will crush the hulls if they are not released shortly.
